3.1 The BookManager BookServer Library

Description:

The BookManager BookServer Library is a group of electronic books made available over the World Wide Web on an IBM BookManager server. You can pick a book to read by finding it in the catalog of all books in the library in a bookshelf.

Using the Library

The BookManager BookServer Library is a catalog of books organized into special collections of books.
 a list of bookshelves containing prebuilt sets of books and special collections of books. The BookManager BookServer Library page is displayed when you first access BookManager BookServer. You can choose the following items on the Library page:

Find field

Allows you to find any book in the BookManager BookServer catalog. Type in a book's descriptive title or name (for example, EPHW2M00) and choose the Find push button.

Browse Bookshelves

List BookManager bookshelves, which contain books that have been grouped by special interest.

Administration

Displays the panel used to set options for and create, delete, and modify bookshelves.

Help

Provides help for the Library page.

Getting Started push button

Links to the online Getting Started book, where you can read about BookManager BookServer and how to use its features.

Product Information push button

Displays product and service level information about BookManager BookServer.

TITLE: Garbage collector for hypermedia systems

----- KWIC -----

Brief Summary Text - BSTX (9):

Even more to the point, there are the systems that enable users to share documents containing embedded references to non-textual media objects residing on a shared file service and for "garbage collecting" those objects to reclaim the storage space allocated to them when there no longer are any documents or document folders containing references to them. See Thomas et al., "Diamond: A Multimedia Message System Built on a Distributed Architecture," Computer, Vol. 18, No. 12, December 1985, pp. 65-78. Systems, such as the Diamond Systems, which employ textually embedded references to refer to voice, video and other diverse types of non-textual data sometimes are referred to as "hypermedia systems." See Yankelovich et al., "Reading and Writing the Electronic Book," Computer, Vol. 18, No. 10, October 1985, pp. 15-30. Unlike most of the other systems that have been proposed, the embedded references used by the Diamond system avoid the need to include copies of the non-textual data files (i.e., voice files) in each document file with which they are associated. However, the simple reference count based garbage collection scheme of the Diamond System is incompatible with permitting references to internally stored objects to be included in documents or document folders that are stored outside the system.

Brief Summary Text - BSTX (11):

"System and Method of Authoring Tools for an Electronic Book", having Ser.

No. 08/572,358, filed concurrently herewith.

Detailed Description Text - DETX (74):

FIG. 20 is an illustration of an option selection dialog box used in embodiments of the electronic book. An option selection dialog box 340 is displayed on the touchscreen 130 in a location out of the way of the portion 330 of the text that is marked when possible. The option selection dialog box 340 includes a plurality of textmarking options including a note capture option 342, a highlighting option 344, a quote capture option 346, and a set bookmark option 348.

Detailed Description Text - DETX (75):

Briefly, the note capture option 342 allows a user to type in notes associated with the portion 330 of the text. The highlighting option 344 leaves the portion 330 of the text highlighted, and stores an indication of this highlighting so that any subsequent return to this page displays the portion 330 as being highlighted. The quote capture option 346 allows a user to store the portion 330 of the text along with source data, such as the name of the author of the book or the title of the book, in the internal machine-readable storage medium 154. The set bookmark option 348 can be selected to add a bookmark to the current page. If the page already has a bookmark, then a number of bookmark management options similar to options used for the dog ear command are provided to the user.

Detailed Description Text - DETX (107):

After, the portion of the text has been marked, a step of displaying an option selection dialog box is performed as indicated by block 456. The option selection dialog box provides a plurality of options to the user, including a note capture option, a highlighting option, a quote capture option, and a set bookmark option.

Detailed Description Text - DETX (108):

As indicated by block 460, a step of receiving a user-initiated event indicative of a selection of one of the options is performed. Based upon the selection, a branching step is performed as indicated by block 462. If the note capture option is selected, then a step of executing an annotation subroutine is performed as indicated by block 464. If the quote capture option is selected, then a step of executing a quote capture subroutine is performed as indicated by block 466. If the highlighting option is selected, the step of executing a highlighting subroutine is performed as indicated by block 470. If the set bookmark option is selected, then a step of executing a bookmark subroutine is performed as indicated by block 472.
